

The Emin Way Presents

Our Human Ability and Freedom to Become More

Throughout history there have been many struggles that have occurred in the name of freedom. We all know that our ability to make conscious decisions provides us with a unique opportunity to shape our future and determine our destiny. This is an ability that is granted to the human more so than other organic life here on this planet.

Alongside this, we also benefit from a host of automatic processes and functions some of which are predetermined in the human design itself and some of which are chosen by us or our society.

These two aspects of ourselves provide propositions for development that are distinct and different and yet complimentary to each other.

Please join us for a two part series as we explore these two different selves and the purpose and function they each serve in determining our future.
